

Figure 1: Illustration of Reinforcement Learning. Variables s and a denote the current state of the world and the action taken by the agent in that state, respectively, while s' is the state to which the agent transitions as a result of that action, and $r(s, a)$ is the associated reward.